Welcome to our new website!

We are excited to provide you with a user-friendly platform to access information about our member-driven organization, the professional and leadership development programs and services we offer, and the latest news and events in the health leadership field. Our goal is to be the connected community that develops, supports, and inspires health leaders across Canada.

Our website has been completely redesigned with a clean, modern design, making it easy for you to find the information you need and stay connected with us. The website update is one element of CCHL's implementation of a new association management platform to improve our members' experience.

The new system and digital transformation were required for the College to update to a membership platform that integrates with best-in-class systems and tools, and connects with external systems used by the College, our Professional and Leadership Development (PLD) team, and our members.

The LEADS Online Self-Assessment is Now Available

The LEADS self-assessment tool is an introduction to the LEADS language and an opportunity for self-reflection so that one can better understand their capabilities and behaviours with respect to the LEADS framework. The results are based on the average of how often an individual demonstrates each behaviour within each of the 5 domains.

As a CCHL member, you have access to this beneficial tool through your Account Centre. Just click on the LEADS Self-Assessment tab, under the Professional Development section and select the leadership context that most aligns with your current work role. Contact us to find out how you can bring this beneficial tool to your organization.
